On Dec 26, 2010, at 10:46 PM, ██████████ wrote:

> Merry Christmas. :) I'll tip off MIT.
>
> ██
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: ▌██████████
> Sent: Sunday, December 26, 2010 10:33 PM
> To: ████████████████████████
> Subject: Re: woot... mit scraper is back
>
> It's gotta be a small group of people in the Dorrance Building on MIT campus the day after Christmas -- it requires an id to enter http://web.mit.edu/mitcard/services.html. And, the scraper is the only one using jstor.org since I only see traffic from curl in the apache logs. In any case, 18.55.6.0/24 is sent to the abuse serverfarm rather than literatum in the ██████████
> ██.
>
> I was able to make a few tweaks to the perl script that delivers: it will sleep 5 seconds to avoid sending back over 4k responses/minute, and it appends a megabyte of 0s to the page returned just for fun. More funs things could be done but he stopped sending requests about 20 minutes ago.
>
>
> On Dec 26, 2010, at 9:30 PM, ██████████ wrote:
>
>> FYI:
>> MIT Scraper is back. Time for some fun with my abuse filters on the ████. 18.55.6.240 is the ip that is blocked now. I will ramp up to class-c before I go to bed -- I just want to play with the sucker for a little bit now that I send him bits with a perl script 8).
>